Image-Guided Pain Therapy. Image-Guided Pain Therapy involves a doctor treating your pain by injecting medication through a small needle, or performing a treatment on soft tissues under direct visualization. A pain management injection is an image-guided injection of medication through a precisely placed, small needle. Pain management injections are either for therapeutic purposes to give pain relief or for imaging (diagnostic) purposes with contrast to gain additional knowledge about your condition. Radiologists, anesthesiologists, and physiatrists perform most image-guided pain management procedures at MGH and Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital.
